All shareholders have the right to request information on company matters at the Annual General Meeting, provided that such information is necessary for the proper assessment of agenda items. This obligation to provide information also covers the company's legal and business relations with subsidiaries. In the event that, during the Annual General Meeting of a parent company (Section 189a item 6 UGB), the consolidated financial statements and the group management report are presented, this obligation to provide information also applies to the situation of the group and of the companies included in the consolidated financial statements.

The information provided must be in compliance with the principles of true and fair accountability and is to be made available during the Annual General Meeting.

The company may refuse to supply such information if,

1. according to sound business judgment, it would be seriously prejudicial to the company or one of its subsidiaries, or if
2. providing such information would comprise a criminal offense.

The Chairman of the Annual General Meeting, in accordance with Section 19 of the Articles of Association, can limit the shareholders' questioning and speaking time within reason. He may in particular impose general or individual restrictions on the speaking time at the beginning of or during the Annual General Meeting.

Requests for information during the Annual General Meeting are usually to be made orally, but may also be done in writing.

To help expedite the progress of the meeting, questions requiring more preparation to answer should be transmitted to the Management Board in text form in due time before the General Meeting. If several motions are made to the same agenda item, Section 119 Para 3 AktG allows the Chairman to determine the order in which the motions are voted on.
